November's trait: Kindness

Kindness: thinking of others and treating them in a friendly and considerate way. Kind Titans treat others the way they want to be treated with gentleness and respect. We find that kindness brightens the other person's day as well as our own.

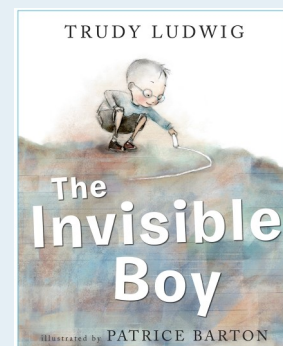

November's character focus is kindness and how we can show kindness to others. The Titan's Creed says "Titans love, respect and protect one another," which reminds us to be kind by treating each other with the love and respect we would want to be treated with.

Titans can show kindness by noticing others, through kind and respectful words, and through actions like finding ways to help others. Titans have opportunities to treat each-other with kindness throughout the day at the playground, at lunch, and the classroom.

What can you do at home?

- Notice moments of kindness at home and verbalize what the kind act was to help your child start noticing acts of kindness around them.
- Look for ways you and your child can do random acts of kindness for others.
- Talk about a time when someone was kind to you or your child and how that made you feel, then think about ways your child can show kindness to someone else.

The book we will read this month at Titan Buddy time: The Invisible Boy.
